based on The presentation of the Embedi/PositiveTechnologies researchers was not confirmed in the not reached a working POK, at the moment I am doing a buffer sniffer that provides a HECI interface, since everything is configured in UEFI, then the sniffer took a little longer, after I completely restore the command set, the POK will be prepared.\nI have ideas, if we talk about UEFI, then this is not just a load dropper, but also possibly some kind of SMM level daemon handlers , plus because Now I have closely studied the ME controller, then there are ideas to test such functionality as rewriting an SPI flash drive through it. Usually this controller is allowed to write to the flash drive, which can not be said about the processor, and some commands have been discovered that are responsible for this functionality." } { fuzzing.\nUnfortunately, the starting theory based on the presentation of Embedi/PositiveTechnologies researchers was not confirmed in the form in which they presented it, POK, at the moment I am making a buffer sniffer that provides HECL interface, because this is all configured in UEFI, then the sniffer took a little more time, after I completely restore the command set, the POC will be prepared. Now I have closely studied the ME controller, then there are ideas to test such functionality as rewriting an SPI flash drive through it. Usually this controller is allowed to write to a flash drive, which can not be said about the processor, and some commands have been discovered that are responsible for this functionality.

a nutshell. \n\nWe find young forks on the exchanges (those that can be mined), analyze their infrastructure, where are the servers, nodes, capitalization.\nFind a place where crypto holders communicate (discord, etc.).\nFind out the IP of the nodes. IPv6. We start DDoSing. We fly into the chat that we found earlier and write that there are problems, the crypt is not displayed, operations are not carried out. (because the crypt depends on mining, there will really be problems).\nHolders start to get nervous and withdraw the main balance "Crypt is falling in price. We are buying at a low price. We are releasing DDoS. Crypto is growing again. We are getting positive. Or a variant of a letter to the creators about the possibility of a ransom if they want DDoS to end. From the main problematic points, this is the implementation of Ipv6 DDoS." } {

"body": "Hi. There is a 0-day privilege escalation exploit for a vulnerability like Use-after-Free in the WIDFRD.sys driver. The exploit was implemented for Windows 10 x64 1607, 1703, 1709, 1803, 1809, 1903, 1909. The vulnerability exists in 2004 and later, but the corresponding code in the driver was rewritten, and the OS crashes into a BSOD before the target null pointer dereference vulnerability is triggered . There are some nuances in operation: not all systems may be vulnerable, as there is a dependence on the hardware configuration. Operation occurs by disabling SMEP (modification CR4), modifying PTE/PML4 if necessary, and executing the code that replaces the token for the target process with the system one. I am publishing an ad here, because my regular customers do not need / did not fit, but in a personal from those who

on the forum expressed a desire to buy, no one answers. Price - 60k, negotiable. Those who wish can write and issue a utility that, when launched on the system of interest will tell if the OS is vulnerable or not. First contact in PM, then in gabber.\n\n\nI will add:\n\nExploit is sold in one hand.\n\nVideo work:\n\nhttps://filetransfer.io/data-package/ctyCDTW6#link\n\nPassword bvdivi2861rVJV\n\nWhat's happening in the video:\n\n1. The wud.exe process that exploits the vulnerability is launched.\n\n2. wud.exe spawns a cmd.exe process and pauses for 5 seconds to check privileges.\n\n3. I run notepad.exe (instance 1) from the created console.\n\n4. After a while, I check my privileges and run notepad.exe (instance 2).\n\n5. In Process Explorer, I check the cmd.exe level and alternately 2 instances of notepad.exe. It can be seen that instance 1 is launched with medium IL, the second (when the rights of cmd.exe have already been elevated) with SYSTEM." } {

"body": "Hi. There is a 0-day privilege escalation exploit for a vulnerability like Use-after-Free in the WIDFRD.sys driver. The exploit was implemented for Windows 10 x64 1607, 1703, 1709, 1803, 1809, 1903, 1909. The vulnerability exists in 2004 and later, but the corresponding code in the driver was rewritten, and the OS crashes into a BSOD before the target null pointer
SMEP (modification CR4), modifying PTE / PML4 if necessary, and executing code that replaces the token for the target process with the system one. I am publishing an ad here, because my regular

wish can write and issue a utility that, when launched on the system of interest will tell if the OS is vulnerable or not. First contact in PM, then in gabber.\n\n\n will add:\n\nExploit is sold in one hand.\n\nVideo of work:\n\n<https://filetransfer.io/data-package/cyCDTW6#link>\n\nPassword bdiviy2861rVJV\n\n\n\nWhat's happening in the video:\n\n1. The wud.exe process starts, exploiting a vulnerability.\n\n2. wud.exe spawns a cmd.exe process and pauses for 5 seconds to check privileges.\n\n3. I run notepad.exe (instance 1) from the created console.\n\n4.
After a while, I check my privileges and run notepad.exe (instance 2).\n\n5. In Process Explorer, I check the cmd.exe level and alternately 2 instances of notepad.exe. It can be seen that instance 1 is launched with medium IL, the second (when the rights of cmd.exe have already been elevated) with SYSTEM."
